London, Oct. 29. 1843.

My dear Sir,

I have great pleasure in fulfilling the a promise I made to you, to inform you of the time of my intended return to America. — I expect to sail, with my brother, in the Steamship Caledonia from Liverpool on Saturday next Nov. 4th. I shall be very happy to take to America letters or parcels you may have to forward. Please send such to Liverpool, care of George Wright & Co. And I would ask that they may be in their hands as early as possible on the morning of Friday Nov. 3d — at the latest, ~~th~~ as I shall be obliged to make up my luggage on that day, & send it to the Ship. If however, you have any letter or very small parcel to send, they may safely come a day later.

Do me the favour to say the same as above, for me, to Mr. Haughton, to Mr. Allen, to your brother — to all of whom please remember me with sincere affection and respect.

Often have I thought, and often while I live shall I think, of the time I passed in Dublin – of the free, unconstrained, & friendly intercourse I had with those there, who are associated so harmoniously together to promote the wellbeing of their brethren. I hope you will not forget me.

Believe me, Yours with sincere & affectionate esteem

Sarah May. Edm.
